Preface.

PREFACE.

THIS WORK, the result of a research extending over many years, and mainly prepared while otherwise engaged in laborious duties, is now offered to the family, and indirectly through them to the public.

No time will be spent in apologizing for its defects: they are unintentional at least, it is hoped unavoidable. Mistakes are often made in copying dates; it is believed such mistakes cannot justly be charged to me. Members of the same family sometimes give different dates for the same event: in such case the one seeming most in accord with others is used. Every printed book, too, is liable to editorial and typographical errors. Among so many names, dates, figures and other facts as are herein presented, errors are clearly unavoidable.

It has been an anxious solicitude to overcome all difficulties and present as correct and as complete a record as possible. Often have several weeks' time and much labor been spent to verify or recover a single important but obscure date.

As the result of this attempt at accuracy there is presented as complete a genealogy as has ever been published in this country; far more so than most of them. While it is intended to embrace only that period of time previous to March 31, 1875, all facts, and there have been quite a number, received up to the day of publication have been inserted.

It is believed to contain the name and brief history of every Vilas, and, with a few exceptions hereafter noted, of every descendant from the Vilas family in the United States and Canada. It also contains a general History of the Family in other countries as well as this, and such other matter as will assist each branch in tracing their relationship with the families allied to them by marriage. And though a few errors may have crept in, in the main the record is correct, and furnishes a basis on which future generations may build with certainty. You should look kindly upon the editor's labors and not criticise too harshly, for it is far more than probable that the errors are due to yourselves.

In the compilation of the personal histories of the members of the family in this country it was considered a delicate matter to decide how many details of those living, or recently deceased, with propriety could be given, and many genealogical histories were studied to gather the views of older and abler genealogists. Some say nothing whatever; others give so much domestic detail as to be nauseous. It has been the intention to avoid both extremes and yet to give those principal points in the life of each which will hereafter be deemed worthy of preservation or serve as a means of identification.

It is greatly to be regretted that, from a number of causes, many, whose lives have been eventful, and who might have contributed much that is interesting now and will be doubly so ere many years, have neglected to send in any history, though all have been repeatedly and persistently urged so to do. Such failure has materially marred the plan of the work, and in consequence a much less entertaining book is given than the design fully carried out would have made.

It is impossible to ascertain to a certainty whether there may not be a few descendants from (196) Virtue Vilas; it is believed there are none.

In a few cases, also, the history is not complete as to all important dates. So much time has already been spent in the endeavor to find them; so much labor proved fruitless; that it is not deemed worth while to delay the publication longer to make further search. It is not probable that more will ever be known of them, but should the study of after years reveal anything, it is my intention to publish such account, together with any errors or omissions, and all changes that may be sent me, in the form of a supplement, to be pasted in this book.

Aside from the History of the Family, which forms no part of the personal histories and for which I alone am responsible, no expression of opinion can be found in the work. Each one of the family has been asked for the facts of his or her life, and from such as were furnished the record has been made up. If some have no histories published it is because they desired none or failed to furnish the material for it.

Quite a number have requested me to write their histories from my personal knowledge of them. In all cases when requested, I have endeavored so to do, but am conscious that they are not what they would have been had they been written by the parties themselves; and if they are unsatisfactory, it should be borne in mind that the personal remembrances of another's life are somewhat limited when such a task is imposed on me amid the duties incident to a work prepared from time to time as other labors permitted.

Occasionally there has been stricken out that, which though interesting perhaps to immediate family relatives, would be out of place in a book open to be scanned by all. It cannot be expected to perpetuate in a book of this kind incidents of home life or narrative of travel. Neither is the work a monument to the caprices of fortune or intended to pander in any way to any design foreign to its title.

I am well aware that a more extended account of the details of our family personal and mental characteristics, travels, etc., might have been added to the work, and, to some possibly, enhanced the interest in it. Such matter has occasionally been sent in and some statistics were prepared, but all were finally omitted. In these particulars our family is no different from others, and to me it seems as though the whole would be out of place, being valueless. Death from the usual causes and from the ordinary variety of diseases has occurred: we have all sizes and weights of men and women; all colors of hair and eyes: we have the usual number of invalids; the usual number of great travelers: some of us go to Europe; some travel in other foreign lands: some of us are shipwrecked; some of us injured in railway and steamboat disasters, etc. The same, doubtless, could be told of all families. To many these particulars are repugnant, invading, as they do, the domestic circle for material, and when presented simply serve to swell its pages without increasing the value of the book. I have tried to prune judiciously, so as to merit the approbation of all and save the work that severe criticism for valueless detail which many have received, and in my opinion merited, from our ablest genealogists. In this attempt I trust I have not robbed it of anything that would add to its true worth.

Some novelties in the arrangement, etc., of the work have been introduced.

The idea of giving, where possible, the maiden name of each married woman mentioned will greatly assist in tracing relationship outside of our family.

The arrangement of the lineal descendants by generations, and of the others under the name of the originator of the branch, with a number to each to ensure identity, and which is always used when reference is made, is believed to be the most convenient form for general consultation. A few minutes' study will show any one how to use it.

For the benefit of those who feel interested therein, there are subjoined a few degrees of relationship to illustrate one or two which are commonly misused. Omitting those which are well known, we first have —

Cousin. The children of brothers and sisters are cousins to each other: the children of half-brothers and -sisters are half-cousins to each other.

Second cousin. The children of cousins are second cousins to each other; and so on in the same generations.

Uncle and Aunt. The brothers and sisters of one's father or mother are that one's uncle and aunt respectively.

Nephews and Nieces are respectively the male and female children of one's brother or sister.

Cousin-nephews and -nieces are the children of one's cousins. The same children are grand-nephews and -nieces of the brothers and sisters one generation back.

Cousin-uncles and -aunts, are respectively the male and female cousins of one's father or mother.

And it is obviously more appropriate for the cousin-uncle to be called "uncle," and the cousin-aunt, "aunt," than "cousin."

It is erroneous, though done by a large majority, to call the children of cousins second-cousins to other cousins. They are not, but are cousin-nephews or -nieces; and the other cousins are cousin-uncles or -aunts. Only children of cousins are second cousins to each other.

A great many more degrees of relationship have been traced out by those who have given much attention to the subject. An able article, by Lemuel Shattuck, Esq., will be found in the first volume of the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, page 355, fully explaining them all.

Practically no attention is paid by any to such relationship, the children of one's cousins being as far as many care to claim, while most do not care to go beyond cousin. While always taking a deep interest in all that concerns the family name, I confess to being of the number, though to several a friendship binds me more closely than could such distant ties of kin. We must stop somewhere, it being an easy matter to find names for every imaginable phase of connection.

Theoretically the subject has attracted much attention but been received with little favor among the mass of people, as is evident by the lack of appreciation that is shown of the labors of that great man who promulgated the Darwinian theory.

At first it was intended to give the authority for each record. But as each is composed of information from a variety of sources it was found impossible to do so. So was it also intended to give the names of all works consulted, but as the list swelled into hundreds that idea was abandoned. The genealogies of several thousand families of this and other countries have been consulted; the town histories of New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, and other states, critically examined; the directories of all Canadian towns and large American and English cities carefully searched, and to complete the Old Country history, many foreign books. While these cannot all be named, I desire to mention two from which I have derived many practical ideas: the Shattuck Memorials, by Lemuel Shattuck; and the Baker Genealogy, by Nelson M. Baker; from both of which I have drawn freely, sometimes almost literally.

Many have sent information, which they believed to be of value, which will not be found in these pages, because it was valueless. Those who have furnished any which they do not find herein may understand it was of no value; indeed, in some instances, the result of the labor expended, were it published, would be so laughable as to be a cause of annoyance to those who, with the best intentions, offered what they believed would be of great assistance.

Errors in spelling other names have been a fruitful source of trouble, although it would seem that few names could be so misspelled as correctly to spell ours.

The dry, statistical manner in which most genealogies have been published, has rendered them almost unintelligible to their readers. Many changes from the usual ways have been made on this account in the endeavor to make this one as readable as possible, though the scope of the work offers small opportunity for the accomplishment of such a design.

Those who see in this work facts stated so plainly as to seem unnecessarily so, must remember that the book is not written for this generation alone; and that the apparently unnecessary plainness is sometimes caused by strict adherence to a given rule, as a single variation from any cause would destroy confidence therein.

Blank leaves are bound in the end of the book for the use of each person or family. Let all enter their numbers and names therein, and record their histories. By so doing, a century from now it will be comparatively an easy matter for some one to again compile the record.

In this country a known lineage has not been considered of so much value as it will be ere many years. It is astonishing how little most of our respectable families know of their immediate predecessors, while they know nothing whatever of their remoter ancestors. Let this not be said of ours, for the opportunity is now afforded to know all about them. It is but a little work — to most a pleasure — to record the facts of family life; a hundred years from now those who gave the few moments required will be kindly remembered by those who succeed them, and it will be a family pride to continue the work now begun.

Every one into whose hands this book may come, and who knows anything to be wrong therein, is especially requested to communicate it at once to me. So long as I live, I will gladly be made the recipient of any and all facts connected with the family, and will preserve and hand them down to future generations.

The size of the work affords no criterion to judge of the labor spent upon it. To one who has never attempted a similar task, it may seem an easy, clerical matter to compile such a book. It has been attempted before by several of the family; a short labor in the unpromising field led them to abandon it. Doubtless the record in this country has been prepared with no more labor than is common to all such projects. But a much larger amount has been expended in the search for remoter ancestors: being comparatively fruitless, the result is made known in few words.

As was easily to be seen would be the case, the work yields no pecuniary profit, but is quite a loss. I am hopeful enough, though, to believe that there will be many who appreciate the value of the work, and like myself, look upon it as one not to be judged by so low a standard.

It is impossible to appropriately thank each for their assistance, when nearly all have rendered what they were able. But thanks are tendered Daniel S. Durrie, Esq., and his daughter, librarian and assistant, of the Wisconsin State Historical Society, for their cheerfully rendered aid.

(387) Henry Chapman Vilas, Esq., has contributed much information, and assisted the work by correspondence in the early stages.

Thanks are also tendered Charles D. Atwood, Esq., United States Vice-Consul at Liverpool, England, for his assistance.

Mrs. (291) M. G. Scripture, of Chicago, has given many important facts and dates.

Hon. (310) Levi B. Vilas and Hon. (333) Joseph Vilas have encouraged and materially assisted in the task of compilation and publication, and to them especially I feel grateful for the substantial interest they have taken in the work.

George Henry Beckwith, Esq., Judge (13) Thompson Chandler, Messrs. (297) Alden Vilas, (384) George H. Vilas, (385) Royal C. Vilas, (391) Charles N. Vilas, and my brothers, have taken especial pains to show their appreciation of the labor expended.

I cannot fail to see (in common, I presume, with all others who have prepared similar works), some errors in the general preparation of the book, which I trust could be avoided by re-writing, did time permit.

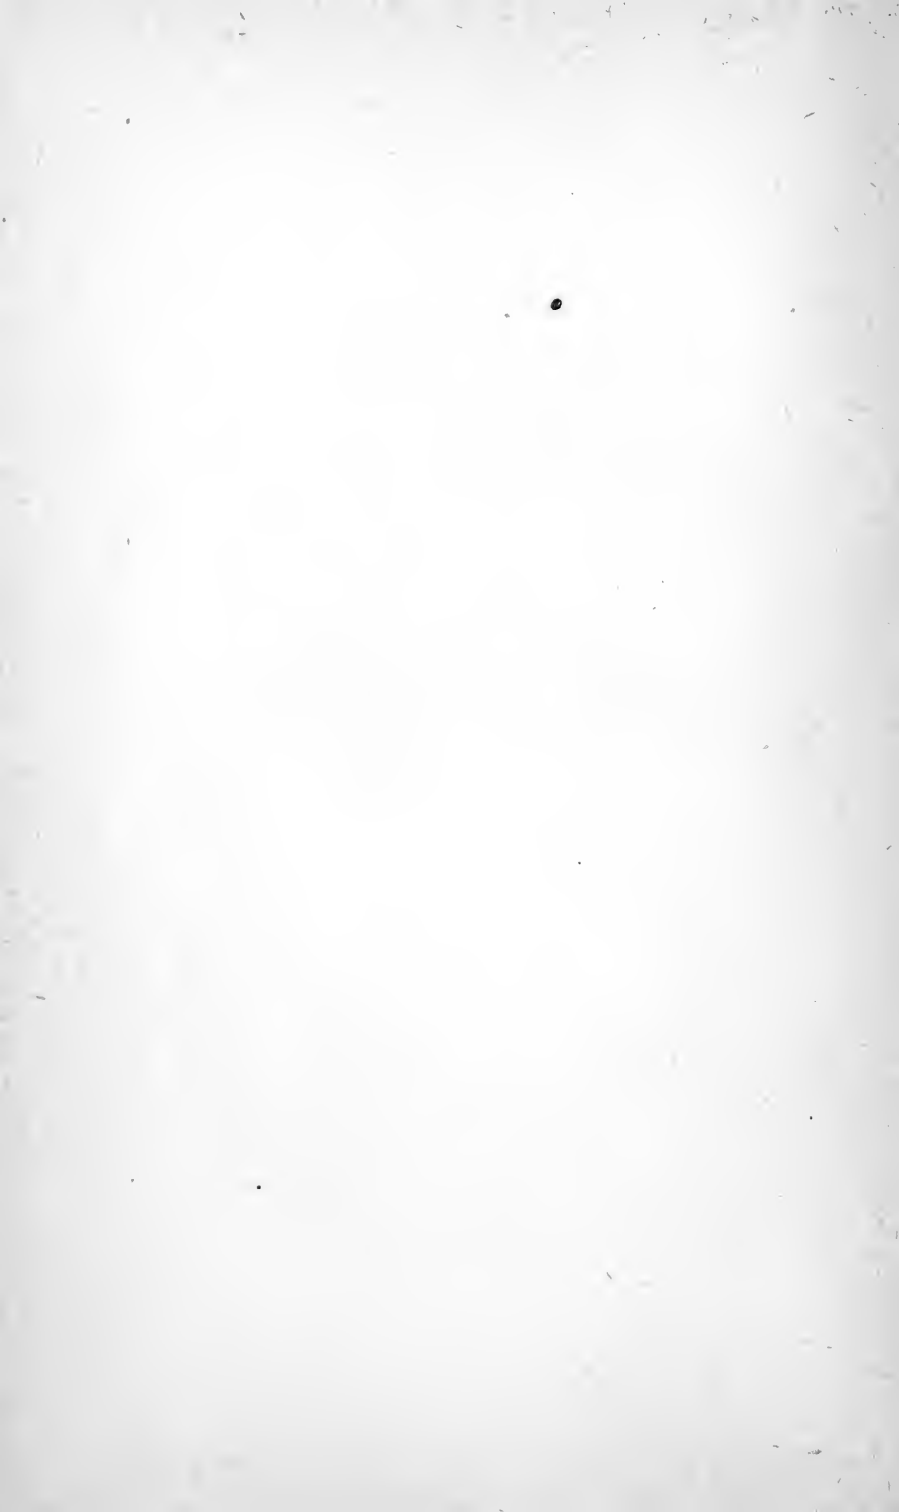

After a labor extending over many years, as the last words are written and the work draws to a close, it is almost a matter of regret to see the end.

It has been a source of much pleasure to me, as the various members of the family were gradually brought to light and arranged into their appropriate families; and as the completion of the book approached, I saw less pleasure in their fruition than I enjoyed in the labors themselves. From all I have received the most considerate attention, and I trust all feel that the same courtesy has been received from me.

HISTORY OF THE FAMILY

AND SIMILAR NAMES.

BY THE EDITOR.

IN tracing a family name much difficulty is met with on account of the changes in spelling; indeed were one to stop on encountering changes of this kind, his labors would cease in a few generations regardless of the point where he began.

To harmonize the various methods of orthography recourse is generally had to the various lexicons of eminent English and American authors who have given much thought and laborious study to the analysis of names. But with the time and labor such authors give to their work mistakes are common, and in no case can it be said that they have positive proof for all they allege. But, though this may be true, their works are very valuable, and if we pause and reflect how little we actually know, and how much we take on faith, it will require no effort to believe what their labors have all but established as facts.

Most of that which the English authors state, they derive from the same authority as that by which many of the oldest houses of Great Britain, the home of aristocracy and rank, lay claim to their ancient names. The result of their labors may then be safely trusted and believed when supported by that authority best of all, the possession of the rank, title and estates which have been handed down in the succession of names; when they are lacking we may look on the former with curiosity and querying, but with no certainty that because our name is similar, we have or ever had anything whatever to do with them.

A few of the early inhabitants of New England were descended from titled families in the Old Country, and it is but natural that their descendants should feel pleasure and pride in tracing their lineage to such progenitors. Coats-of-arms emblazoned on such articles as were brought over by them are shown, and doubtless are authentic.

We have seen several such emblems of gentility in families other than our own, but are free to admit we never saw the authority that warranted their assumption by those who hold them, nor had any reason to believe they were genuine in their purport. There are in this country shops where coats-of-arms are "made to order on short notice," and where many of our justly untitled men purchase a counterfeit design, and by placing it on their equipage establish their claims to noble lineage. Having but recently seen one of these "heraldic colleges," and knowing these things to be true, we shall not assume to give herein any of the armorial bearings which we have found belonging to similar names in the English books of heraldry.

It has been our experience to find that many persons in this country are not desirous of having their lineage accurately traced. Few that have rendered their names eminent can look back generations and find many who have shed lustre on the name: some have only to look in their own to find disgrace. Others care nothing at all for ancestry; perhaps most of all prefer to think themselves linked to some distinguished native or titled foreign family from similarity of name, and fear definite search lest the delicate connection which binds them be broken or shown to be but a phantom tie.

We know that many of the family believe those traditions, which would seem to be based on fact by having so firmly perpetuated themselves, that ally our family to some foreign title. Be that as it may, laborious effort has failed to discover the tie; and, while we have no desire to undervalue in any way a descent from true nobility of any land, let us remember that we live in a country where republican principles prevail, and not yield to a silly, and generally vain, endeavor to establish in the public mind a claim to noble lineage.

Lower's Dictionary of the Family Names of the United Kingdom pronounces the names Villiers, Villers and Villars to be the same.

By careful tracing, we have followed the Villiers family in the books of heraldry from the time of HENRY III (beginning of the XV century), to seven years after the time our first known ancestor was born in England (1711). The name has repeatedly changed in form of spelling, but has never become Vilas, though it has Vilars and Villars.

Burke's General Armory contains the arms of the Villers and Vilers families.

Lower also says that the Villars "family are said to have come into England with the Conqueror (William), in 1066, which is probable."

It is certainly not impossible, and would be strange if it were not so alleged, as nearly every descendant of an English family desiring aristocratic blood makes a similar claim.

Burke's Genealogical and Heraldic History of the Extinct and Dormant Baronetcies of England, Ireland and Scotland, says: "The family of Villers came in at the Conquest, and were eminent under the Plantagenets." (1154.)

Sir Richard de Villars was a crusader under Edward I. (1273.)

The Earl of Jersey's family trace to Alexander de Villiers, Lord of Brokesby, early in the XIII century.

It is traditionary in our family that our name was formerly spelled Villas, or Villars, or Vilars, more likely the latter, but no proof has been found; nor has any member of the family ever known it to be so spelled by any one known to be of our family.

Few of the ancient families of Great Britain have kept trace of all their members of even recent date, and it may be that our family sprung from one of the younger sons of some of these families; for in the countries where primogeniture obtains, they often bear no part in the recorded, though doubtless their full share in the unrecorded, lineage of their family.

The name of Vilas appears in none of the indexes of lost heirs, next of kin, and chancery reports published in the papers, or on record in the courts, of England.

The Villiers name is also found in the French and Italian languages, so that we are left to the contemplation of all that has been presented of similar names free to form our own opinions of where and from whom we are descended.

The name of Vilas is not to be found in the London, England, directory for the current year, though the similar names are there found. No directory published in the world equals that of London. It is an official publication, contains many hundred thousand names, and may perhaps justly claim to hold a typical name of nearly every English-speaking family.

Careful examination has also been made of all large libraries in English-speaking lands; over ten thousand published and private English genealogies searched for and by us; the result of which proves beyond reasonable doubt that there never has been any printed record of any family of our name in any country, and that we shall never know more of our origin than is herein presented.

The study of the similar names in this country has been pursued with much care and over a long period of time. Exceptional advantages of travel have given the opportunity to visit most of the larger New England cities and towns and examine many genealogical works.

Such study resulted in the comparison of the following names, which are thought by our best authorities to be originally the same:

Vial,	Viale,	Viele,	Vila,
Viles,	Villers,	Vilus,	Vyall.

A somewhat extensive correspondence, and a tracing of our own name back to 1704, have failed to establish any connection between them, and we believe that if any exists it must be looked for at an earlier date.

The origin and significance of our name have also received careful consideration. A number of our scholars skilled in the genesis of names, among whom are the eminent linguist, Prof. James D. Butler, LL. D., and the talented philologist, Prof. John B. Feuling, Ph. D., have carefully considered the subjects, but are unable to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion. Neither has the name been found in any of the works devoted to the consideration of curious or characteristic names.

Bond thinks the Viles family originally the same as ours. No connection has been found, as stated. The family originated in Waltham, then a part of Watertown, Massachusetts, as early as 1729. A fuller description will be found in Hudson's History of Lexington, Massachusetts, page 252. Also in Bond's History and Genealogies of Watertown, Massachusetts, page 616, to which the reader is referred, if it is desired to pursue the inquiry.

The history of our first known ancestor, PETER, has been the subject of much interest and inquiry. With many who have since passed away we talked regarding him, but as in our time none who knew him were living, nothing definite can be ascertained. Many accounts of him and his arrival in this country have also been sent us. An endeavor was made, from time to time, to harmonize these memoranda, so different in details, and prove their authenticity. But the almost entire absence of records at the time he doubtless landed in this country, has rendered all such labor futile; and reluctantly we are forced to give uncorroborated such desultory fragments as tradition has handed down.

From such source we have it that he was enticed from college (some say Oxford) on board a sailing ship and forcibly brought to this country, from which, by the then existing laws, he was unable to return.

Many other details of his life have been written out, but we confess that we can see no way by which they might even be believed to be true; and supported by no authority, we think them unworthy a place in these pages.

It is to be regretted that so little can be told of him and the earlier generations. This is mainly due to the fact that little attention was at that time paid to recording places and important facts by individuals, and almost none at all by corporations.

Of those who have borne our name in this country, it may be truthfully said that they generally have been and are practical and useful members of society, serving faithfully in their sphere and generation. If few have risen to fill high public stations, it is also true that none have fallen below respectability. Few have become very rich, none have become paupers, most have found a happy mean. No criminal has been found among them. Most of them have been and are farmers industriously cultivating their own soil.

It would be erroneous to judge of the earlier generations without due allowance for the time and state of the country they lived in. If there were fewer prominent, there was also less opportunity for prominence and more demand for quiet pioneer work. Advantages of education and for refinement were not numerous; necessity for active labor to the neglect of accomplishments, often even the rudiments, of education, was urgent, and not unfrequently demanded nearly their whole time.

Differing in opinion from many of our ablest genealogists, we believe that no complete genealogical history of any family can be written without including the descendants in the female line and their offspring. The former certainly always have an equal share of the family blood; often a larger proportion of the brains: while the latter not unfrequently reflect more credit on the family than those who bear the name.

The record of our family in time past is an honorable one, and compares favorably with that of other families. Those who have passed away served their day well, making good use of such advantages as they had: now that the development of our country and the opening of new ways of advancement demand different and more progressive abilities, we believe the record will show that the present generations lag not behind, but are making the expected progression on those which have gone before.

Genealogy.

S. F. Vilas.

AN ALPHABETICAL INDEX

To all names herein mentioned will be found near the end of the book.

When the family name is Vilas it is not given and the baptismal name is printed in SMALL CAPITALS; when the family name is other than Vilas it is given with the baptismal name in plain text. All blood descendants are designated by numbers; no others are.

To avoid needless repetition, the names and history of all of the name of Vilas will be found only in the generation of their birth. Those of other names will be found in the generation of the Vilas who originated that branch of changed names, and will follow each other in the order of their generation. For the same reason it also must be understood that no one has married or died unless so stated.

Inasmuch as the book will be very generally read when first issued, for the convenience of the reader it is nearly always mentioned when there is no child by a marriage; but should no mention be made, reference should be had to the index for definite information. In all cases when there is a child, the page on which the history of their family begins will be indicated opposite the parents' names.

Whenever an exception is to be made, as when the question has not been answered, etc., attention will be called to the fact.

It is also to be understood, when no mention is made to the contrary, that the children reside with their parents.

When it is desired to trace a lineage forward, first find by the index the page on which occurs the name; then turn forward to each successive generation to find the children, using the index for this purpose.

To trace backward, first find the name desired by the index; preceding each family will be found the number and name of the progenitor, and as the numbers follow in numerical order, continue to turn backward until, in each case, the first ancestor is found.

FIRST GENERATION.

FIRST GENERATION.

PETER, son of NOAH, the first one of the name known to have landed on this continent; the progenitor of all who are mentioned in this genealogy, and it is believed of all the family name now living in this country, was born in England, Feb. 24, 1704.

He married Mercey Gay (daughter of John Gay, and his wife Mary), who was born Feb. 17, 1697, and died Aug. 15, 1770. She is said to have been a French woman.

He died Apr. 21, 1756.

Such account of their lives as has been communicated will be found in the editor's History of the Family.

SECOND GENERATION.

SECOND GENERATION.

(2) NOAH, the only child of (1) PETER and his wife Mercy Gay, was born Nov. 2, 1733, and died Sep. 17, 1799, it is supposed at Alstead, Cheshire county, New Hampshire.

Early in life he moved to Alstead, where, in common with those sturdy pioneers about him, he began to open up the then wild country. He was a devout Christian, and the diary left by him recounts the many struggles he had in maintaining his strong faith.

July 24, 1760, he married Abigail Baker (daughter of Gideon Baker and his wife Priscilla), who was born Mar. 28, 1735, and died July 10, 1808.

THIRD GENERATION.

THIRD GENERATION.

Children of (2) NOAH and his wife Abigail Baker.

(3) JOSEPH was born Apr. 20, 1761, and died Jan. 26, 1789.

(4) NOAH was born in Alstead, Cheshire County, New Hampshire, Feb. 1, 1763.

He served in the Revolutionary war, afterward going to Concord, Essex county, Vermont, to reside, about the year 1800. He was one of the pioneer settlers of the town, laboring hard to clear the forest and till the land.

Nov. 21, 1793, he married Lovina Cady, who was born Sep. 20, 1777, and died Apr. 28, 1833.

Both were members of the Congregational Church.

He remained at Concord until his death, which occurred there Oct. 31, 1820.

(5) SAMUEL was born in Massachusetts (Grafton?) Sep. 12, 1764.

He married Ruby Cooper.

But little is known of him and his family. For reasons unknown he separated from all the rest of the name who know nothing of him.

He died at Catskill, Green county, New York, Sep. 1, 1806.

(6) NATHANIEL was born in Massachusetts (Grafton?) Oct. 12, 1766.

Apr. 30, 1789, he married Mary Chandler, who was born Sep. 1, 1767, and died Jan. 9, 1805.

July 28, 1805, he married Lovina Crosby, who was born Aug. 12, 1786, and died Sep. 9, 1851.

For some time he was engaged in contracting, etc., though mainly a farmer. He built the first water-works into Boston, Massachusetts, in 1794, carrying the water in two lines of three-inches bore logs from Roxbury, a town situated about three miles distant.

He died Dec. 12, 1852.

(7) AARON was born in Grafton, Worcester county, Massachusetts, Sep. 7, 1768.

Mar. 17, 1802, he married Deborrah Spencer, who was born Mar. 19, 1770, and died Mar. 24, 1859.

He spent his childhood at his birthplace, removing at the age of fourteen years to Alstead, New Hampshire, where he remained sixteen years. From there he removed to Derby, Vermont, and thence to East Farnham, Province of Quebec, Canada, where he spent the remainder of his life, thirty-eight years. He was a farmer by occupation, but interested in religious matters, to which he gave much attention, being a member of the Free-will Baptist denomination.

He died at East Farnham, Jan. 20, 1862.

(8) MOSES was born in Grafton, Massachusetts, Mar. 19, 1771.

Soon after he moved to Alstead, New Hampshire; thence to Randolph, Vermont, where he remained until about 1800, when he went to Sterling, Vermont. He nearly always was a farmer, though engaged in trade a part of his life.

He died at Johnson, Vermont, Meh. 7, 1849.

Jan. 30, 1799, he married Mercy Flint (daughter of Samuel Flint and Lucy Martin), who was born Mar. 25, 1777, and died Mar. 9, 1861. (See Genealogy of the Flint Family, page 58.)

(9) A DAUGHTER was born and died Mar. 7, 1773.

(10) ABAGAIL was born in Grafton, Massachusetts, Jan. 25, 1775.

INDEX.

[Those consulting this index should, for a better understanding of that to which it is the key, read the remarks on pages 45-6.

The figures in the column to the left of the name are the distinguishing numbers of the names.

The figures in the first column to the right refer to the pages on which appear the names to which they are opposite; those in the second column refer to the pages on which begin the names of their children. But one reference is made though the name may occur several times on the page.]
